AUSTERITY THAT'S ENOUGH

People's Assembly Against Austerity

Saturday 22 June 2013, 9:30am – 5pm,
Central Hall Westminster, Storey's Gate,
London SW1H 9NH

Trade union general secretaries, MPs, campaigners, and cultural figures have put out a call for a People's Assembly Against Austerity. Thousands of individuals and organisations have signed up in the last few weeks.

The assembly aims to "play a key role in ensuring that this uncaring government faces a movement of opposition broad enough and powerful enough to generate successful co-ordinated action, including strike action."

Model motion People's Assembly Against Austerity

[Insert name of organisation] supports the September 2012 TUC Congress resolution, that "the trade union movement must continue leading from the front against this uncaring government with a coalition of resistance taking co-ordinated action where possible with far-reaching campaigns including the consideration and practicalities of a general strike."

In support of the aims of this resolution a number of Trade Union General Secretaries and anti-cuts organisations have supported the call for a People's Assembly Against Austerity that aspires to build a movement for social justice and develop a strategy for resistance to mobilise millions of people, through trade unions and local community organisations, against the ConDem government.

The Assembly will provide a national forum to develop links between trade unions, trade union councils and grassroots community based campaigns, and to build confidence of those promoting anti-austerity views which, whilst increasingly popular, are barely represented in Parliament.

[Insert name of organisation] agrees to support the call for the People's Assembly at Central Hall Westminster on Saturday 22 June 2013 and send [x] delegates.
